Czech Jews Get JDC Support Despite Withdrawal

Several thousand Czech Jews are expected to continue to benefit from aid provided by the Joint Distribution Committee as a result of an arrangement negotiated with Czech authorities by Henry Levy, former director of Czechoslovakia, before he closed JDC offices in that country in mid-February. In a report to JDC European headquarters in Paris, Levy also said that some 25,000 Czech Jews had emigrated with JDC aid to Israel and other lands during the past 18 months and expressed himself as hopeful that an additional four thousand would be enabled to depart to Israel during 1950.

Levy left Czechoslovakia after a year and a half as director there, when the organization was told by the government to wind up its operations. The agreement for continued aid to Czech Jewry provides that 20,000,000 crowns as well as a considerable amount of supplies, are to be turned over to two Jewish communal organizations, RADA, the Council of Jewish Communities of Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia; and SVAZ, the Council of Jewish Communities of Slovakia.

About 6,500 Jewish men, women and children are under the care of RADA, and about 10,500 receive aid from SVAZ. Institutions maintained by RADA, which formerly received JDC subventions and which will continue to receive aid, include three old-age homes, one in Prague, one in Podebrady, and one in Brno; and two orphan hostels in Prague. In addition, RADA will continue to provide food, cash subsidies and medical aid to more than 1,000 ill and aged men and women, and will also take over JDC's subventioning of a number of university students and vocational trainees. SVAZ will maintain [illegible] will continue the [illegible] of supplies (including [illegible]), priority being given to tubercular patients, nursing mothers, babies, pregnant women, the sick and the indigent poor. Religious articles and prayer books are included among the supplies to be distributed.

Of the 25,000 Jews who have left Czechoslovakia for new homes during the past year and a half, some 18,000 have emigrated to Israel. The other 7,000 have gone to the United States, Canada, and other countries. The prospects for continued emigration, especially to Israel, are good, Levy reported. Negotiations are now going on between the Israeli and Czech governments for the movement of an additional 4,000 Czech Jews to the Holy Land during 1950. In addition, some 1,000 Czech Jews already have landing permits for Australia or visas for the United States, Canada, and other countries, but Levy was less optimistic about their prospects for leaving.

22 Millions To Be Spent On Brandeis U.

Brandeis University, Jewish-sponsored nonsectarian institution, announced at Waltham, Mass., that it had adopted a master plan for the development of its 100-acre campus. The plan calls for the construction of fifty buildings during the next ten years, at an estimated cost of $22,715,000 according to George Albert, president of the university's board of trustees.

The announcement pointed out that the design, created by the firm of Saarinen, Saarinen and Associates, architects, will be executed in two stages. The first provides for the construction of facilities for the university's Faculty of Arts and Sciences, and the second calls for facilities for the university's projected professional and graduate schools. The entire expansion program is expected to be completed by 1960.

Thirty buildings, at an estimated cost of $13,215,000, will be constructed in the first stage. The plan calls for immediate building activity, and ground will be broken within thirty days for the first of the new buildings, a group of residence facilities. All required instructional, laboratory, housing and extra-curricular facilities for the undergraduate college will be provided when the first stage of the plan is completed.

At a future date, announcement will be made of plans for the housing of the professional and graduate schools. Mr. Alpert asserted that this second stage of the university's master plans would probably call for twenty additional buildings at a cost of about $9,500,000.

Mr. Alpert declared that the enthusiastic reception with which Brandeis University has been greeted [illegible]

WJC Reports Threat To Jews In Costa Rica

The Jewish community of Costa Rica is "profoundly disturbed" over the possible consequences of a concentrated press campaign demanding the cancellation of their citizenship and their compulsory repatriation, the World Jewish Congress reported in making public a letter from Dr. Robert S. Marcus, political director of the World Jewish Congress, to President Otilio Ulate, of Costa Rica. Dr. Marcus mentions specifically the newspapers La Prensa Libre, and La Hora as responsible for public clamor against the Jews. The newspapers' publication of "violent anti-Jewish accusations have given us cause for great concern. As the result of this campaign of slander, the members of the Jewish community of Costa Rica have been publicly threatened with revision of their residence rights, cancellation of citizenship gained through naturalization, and even compulsory repatriation."

The World Jewish Congress requested that "the Jewish community of Costa Rica be reassured concerning their legal status and that their right to enjoyment of complete equality in law and in fact will be scrupulously preserved." Dr. Marcus recalled that on a visit to Costa Rica in February, 1949, he was assured by Mr. Ulate, at that time President-elect, that when he assumed office he would "continue the traditions of your country in implementing the basic principle of equality before the law for all sectors of the population."

Seminary Acquires Rare Volumes

[illegible] the Pentateuch (The Five Books of Moses) which was printed in Zamora, Spain, in 1487, has been presented to the library of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America by Louis M. Rabinowitz, chairman of the library committee and a member of the board of directors. Mr. Rabinowitz's latest gift is the third book issued by the press of Samuel ben Musa at Zamora, but the only one preserved in a single copy. The preceding two, a Pentateuch and a prayer book, are only known through a reference in the printer's note in this volume.

It contains the work of Rashi (Rabbi Solomon ben Isaac), celebrated 11th century savant, whose commentaries on the Bible carry a weight and authority which have rendered them inseparable from the text. The work of one of the all-time masters of rabbinical literature, Rashi's Commentary clearly reveals the acuteness and preciseness for which this most popular expounder of the Bible and the Talmud has been acclaimed.

Mr. Rabinowitz, who has been responsible for many important additions to the Seminary's singular collection of rare books and manuscripts, recently made it possible for the library to acquire a precious copy of the Fourteen Books of Maimonides, handwritten in Germany in the 14th century. It was his generosity, too, which provided the building now housing the Seminary's new West Coast branch, the University of Judaism, in Los Angeles, California.

The Library of the Jewish Seminary, generally acknowledged to represent the world's greatest collection of Hebraica and Judaica, possesses 147,000 printed volumes and 8,500 manuscripts. These include about 90 of the world's 150 books published before 1500, still known to be in existence, and fragments of 40 other such incunabula.

The 14th century hand-written copy of Maimonides' Fourteen Books is a 900-page volume measuring more than five inches thick. It is bound in wood and covered in fine stamped leather. Several months ago it was brought to America by members of a German-Jewish family in whose possession the book had been for many generations. All during World War II, the volume was lodged in the library of Oxford University.

The fourteen books of Maimonides' work, the Mishneh Torah, is an extensive religious code which summarized the entire legal, ethical, and ritual content of the Bible and Talmud. Originally composed by the 12th century sage for his personal use, it developed into the most comprehensive and influential religious code of Jewish law compiled since the days of the Talmud.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Help To Israel

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, called for support by the American people of the record numbers of immigrants entering Israel as well as help for people throughout the world who are concerned with human rights and freedom. Speaking before 2,000 women who started the 1950 campaign of the Women's Division of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York with a luncheon-rally at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Mrs. Roosevelt called attention to Israel's problem in solving its immigration problems, and also the economic problems that have confronted the newcomers.

At the same time, it was announced by Mrs. Mal Horne, chairman of the Women's Division, that Mrs. Roosevelt had contributed $3,500 to the Appeal. One thousand dollars of this gift was made in memory of the late Mrs. Henry Morgenthau Jr., which represented the award Mrs. Roosevelt received from the Freedom Lodge of Bnai Brith for being the outstanding humanitarian of 1949.

Henry Morgenthau Jr., general chairman of the nationwide campaign of the United Jewish Appeal, announced that the Appeal received $24,000,000 in cash, or twice as much as was received as of the same period last year when $11,750,000 in cash was received in the first two months of the year.

In pleading for accelerated support of the campaign, Mr. Morgenthau emphasized that the Jews of Israel "are determined not to place any restrictions on immigration", adding, however, that "lack of funds will reduce the numbers that they can feed and clothe." "That is why," he added, "it is [illegible] that those who must get out of the countries of distress will be denied their chance to find a new life in Israel."

Speaking on the subject of human rights and freedom and the imperative need of American support of these principles, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted that "I think we must move quickly because it is

JDC Aided 12,000 To Havens In Month

More than 12,000 Jewish refugees from Europe and Moslem lands reached permanent havens in Israel, the United States, and other countries during February with the aid of the Joint Distribution Committee, it was announced by Moses A. Leavitt, executive vice-chairman. One-third of this total consisted of men, women and children who were aided to leave Eastern European countries under the emergency "now or never" emigration program to aid as many people as possible to leave before expiration of deadlines such as set by Poland, which has announced that it will permit no Jews to emigrate after August 1950.

Since V-E Day, JDC, major American agency aiding distressed Jews abroad, has helped more than 442,000 Jews from Europe, North Africa, and other distressed areas to find new homes, making passage arrangements and paying all costs en route, including transportation, for Israel-bound refugees. Of the 12,000 total who emigrated during February, some 10,700 went to Israel. The largest number came from Moslem countries, including more than 6,200 from North Africa, and more than 2,000 Yemenite Jews who were flown from Aden to Israel as part of the air-rescue "Operation Magic Carpet." In little over a year JDC has flown more than 42,000 Jews who have left Yemen, to Israel, in the greatest civilian air exodus in history.

Only 288 Jews emigrated from the DP camps of Germany, Austria, and Italy to Israel during February. Most of the 45,000 Jewish DP's remaining in these countries consists of those waiting to emigrate to the United States under the U.S. DP Act, and several thousand "hard core" cases waiting to go to Israel for whom JDC is now making special emigration arrangements. These "hard core" cases represent handicapped immigrants, and their families, requiring institutional and welfare care. Jews in the DP countries in 1948 numbered more than 250,000.

Assails Unity "Myth", Charges Threats To Silence Critics Of Nationalism

A suggestion that the State of Israel renounce its claims on Jews throughout the world and that American Jews cease to interfere in the political life of the new state was made by Alfred M. Lilienthal, Washington lawyer and writer. Mr. Lilienthal told a group at Temple Israel, 310 West Ninety-first Street, New York, that there was "no greater nonsense than the myth of Jewish unity."

In a speech that was sharply critical of the leaders of Israel and of the Zionist movement in America, he asserted that American Jews must take a choice between universal Judaism and nationalism. He made it clear that his choice was Judaism as a religion, says the New York Times.

"If I were permitted to weave a dream or two," he said, "this is the Shangri-La I would build: the State of Israel would renounce its claim on world Jewry and would return to the original concept of the refuge and the haven. Israel would sever its umbilical ties with all private political and propaganda organizations outside its boundaries.

"Having removed the threat of expansion, Israel would find peace with the Arab world and would gain economic union of her neighbors decreed by the United Nations. These are essential pre-requisites to the peace and security of the Middle East.

"At home, the Zionist Organization of America, having completed its work, would now bow out. We, adherents of Judaism, would concern ourselves with a better understanding of the precepts of our religious faith rather than with the machinations of any foreign state."

He used the words "complete integration" to describe [illegible] thought the new goal of American Jews should be.

"We would clearly reveal that we are as divided as those of other faiths, on political, social and economic questions, and that there is no greater nonsense than the myth of Jewish unity," he added.

Mr. Lilienthal spoke at the Temple, where he was confirmed, to answer critics of an article he wrote on the question. This was printed in a national magazine in September, under the title "Israel's Flag Is Not Mine."

Mr. Lilienthal said the birth of Israel meant that American Jews could no longer exist as "half a people—half a religion." For some he went on, the choice was easy; their credo was: "We are Americans of Jewish faith—our nationality is American; our religion is Judaism."

For others, he said the words Jew and Israeli have become synonymous as "organized Jewry intensifies its self-identification, political, cultural and otherwise, with the foreign state of Israel." He denied the existence of a "Jewish nationality" in the United States.

Mr. Lilienthal charged that there had been continued attempts by "vilification, coercion—often economic—threats, and even intimidation" to silence those who criticize Jewish nationalism. Despite this, he went on, protests against the claims of any one group to speak for all Jews as a unified national bloc were being heard.

He defined the difference between his point of view and that of the Zionists as the difference between "voluntary philanthropy toward co-religionists and the foisting upon American Jewry of a responsibility to, and political support of, Israel."

The above painting is the work of Eric Goldberg whose art exhibit will be on view at the Dominion Galleries, in Montreal, from March 15 to 25. Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Palestine, the United States, and Canada, have all at one time served as the setting for Goldberg's work. He was first influenced by his father, a European portrait painter who numbered the late Kaiser Wilhelm among his sitters. A serious painter from early childhood, Goldberg was singled out and encouraged by Renoir, while still a student at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. Later, at the Academie Julien, he studied under Jean Paul Laurens along with two other noted Canadian artists, A. Y. Jackson and John Lyman. In Germany he taught at the Berlin Academy of Art. In Palestine he was appointed to the faculty of the famed Bezalel Art School of Jerusalem where he reorganized the artistic output of its many departments, taught drawing and painting, and designed the craft objects for which the Bezalel has become renowned. A close friend of Chaim Weizmann, President of Israel; Bialik, Shmarya Levine, and Arthur Ruppin, Goldberg became a factor in the cultural life of Palestine. His most recent pictures are of the Gaspe country and its people. Goldberg is a Canadian citizen residing at 331 Clarke Avenue, Montreal, with his Canadian-born wife, Regina Seiden, an artist, who is represented in the National Gallery of Canada, at Ottawa, by three works.

The Most Miserable Jews In The World

By Rabbi Manuel Laderman, of Denver, Colorado, National Vice-President Of The Mizrachi Organization

Jewish communities in countries like Morocco and Tunisia are far older than the oldest existing kehillot in Europe. Long before there was a beginning of Polish Jewry, centuries before the communities which gave birth to Rabbenu Gershon of Mayence and Rashi in France, before any Jews had begun that epoch which came to be known as the "Golden Age of Spain", there were flourishing congregations and yeshivot in Fez and Marrakech and Sfax and Djerba. In these North African centers they still speak of the exiles from Spain and Portugal of the fifteenth century as "new-comers." The ritual which they brought with them from the Iberian peninsula is regarded as an upstart innovation, because their own minhagim are so much older. Some of these communities were in existence when the Temple still stood in Jerusalem.

In all of the North African countries Jewish practice is the rule. Whenever I visited any institution and asked whether the food that was prepared there was kosher, I met with amazement. "Mais oui," of course it is, as though no other possibility existed.

Casablanca has over one hundred synagogues. The Beth Din in each of these cities has government authority in all matters of "personal status." That includes marriage, divorce, and inheritance law. The rabbinical court is busy every day, and its rabbis practice no other rabbinical functions than those of "din torah." Their decisions are reported to the local authorities, and the native police are at the service of the Beth Din in executing its judgments.

The interest of American Jews has been drawn to these co-religionists of ours for two reasons. One is their number. At a time when we lament the catastrophic loss of so many of our people in Europe, when one third of our numbers have fallen victims to the horrors of the last fifteen years, we have "re-discovered" a large resource of numbers in these Arabic countries. Morocco counts over a quarter of a million Jews. Algeria has about one hundred and fifty thousand, and Tunisia, one hundred thousand.

These three countries which I visited in July have more of our people than all of continental western Europe. In all of eastern Europe, outside of Russia, we can count no larger numbers than in this one segment of northwest Africa. If one were to include the figures for other Arabic countries, Egypt, for example, and Iraq and Syria, oriental Jewry outnumbers all of the continent of Europe, excluding Russia. It is of great importance that these numbers shall be included in our thinking and planning about the future of world Jewry.

There is another reason for a greater concern on our part about these Sephardic brethren of ours. They are probably the most miserable Jews in the world. Their poverty is abyssmal. Great numbers of them live in horrible ghettoes, called Mellah in Morocco, Hara in Tunisia. Their homes are abominable caves and holes. No light, no water. I have seen them buying water from a peddler who doles it out of a sack. With this degrading poverty go the endemic diseases of tuberculosis and trachoma and favus. There are villages in the interior where all the children are blind. Infant mortality is the highest anywhere.

The Hadarim where ghetto children study are a disgrace. Forty children, fifty of them, crowd into a tiny room with a teacher equipped with one torn book and a big stick that he wields freely. Boys sit in classes with heads uncovered because the families are too poor to provide them with any kind of hat or yarmelka. The parents try to eke out some miserable livelihood, both fathers and mothers, so they send infants of three and four to the heder, with a piece of dry bread for the child to suck on all day long as his only food.

A good beginning at a better standard of education has been made by the Otzar Ha-Torah. Their schools are outside the ghetto walls. That alone is a great improvement. Their class-rooms are clean, their teachers more qualified. Books are available, and a hot meal is served. The French Alliance Israelite Universelle has had a school system in these countries for half a century. Their schools have a higher level, though far below what we would consider adequate. This year their schools, which have been weak in Jewish studies, have increased the time devoted to Hebrew. But far more needs to be done.

An accelerated program of medical care and social welfare has been introduced in the last few years by the Joint Distribution Committee. Undoubtedly, that program will be increased and will help alleviate the wretched conditions. The great hope of these people, however, is aliyah to Israel. Now that Israel has reached the one million mark in Jewish population, it offers the opportunity for achieving the second million soon. Because they are Jews, and because they are religious Jews, we of Mizrachi should champion the cause of our fellow-Jews of North Africa.

JEWISH BOOK COUNCIL OFFERS AWARDS TO AUTHORS

The Jewish Book Council of America, sponsored by the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB), will make two literary awards in 1950, one to the author of a non-fiction work of general Jewish interest and literary merit, and the other to the author of a work of fiction of Jewish interest, either a novel or a collection of short stories. The non-fiction award of $500 will be known as the "Isadore Hershfield Award," in memory of the late Isadore Hershfield, of Washington, D.C., for two generations actively identified with Jewish communal affairs in the nation's capitol. Dr. Solomon Grayzel is president of the Jewish Book Council. A committee of Mr. Hershfield's friends, headed by Isadore Turover, Washington Jewish leader, raised the fund to make the award possible.

The fiction award of $250 was provided by Samuel H. Daroff, Philadelphia, Pa., philanthropist and civic leader.

The Hershfield Award will be presented to the winner in connection with the dedication of the new Judaica Library in the Jewish Community Center of Washington, D.C. Mr. Hershfield bequeathed $10,000 to the Centre which is using the bequest to create the Judaica Library in his memory. Both awards will be given to authors of books published during the calendar year of 1949. To be considered, the books must have been published in the United States and written and published in the English language. The judges of both awards will be at liberty to withhold any award if in their judgment no book or books qualify for the awards.

For the fiction award the judges are: Dr. Ludwig Lewisohn, critic and novelist; Rabbi Louis I. Newman, of Temple Rodelph Sholom, New York; and Rabbi Mortimer J. Cohen, Philadelphia, editor of "In Jewish Bookland" section of the JWB Circle. For the non-fiction award the judges are: Dr. Grayzel, editor of the Jewish Publication Society of America; Jacob Shatzky, head of the history section of the Yiddish Scientific Institute; Dr. Joshua Bloch, head of the Jewish Division of the New York Public Library; and Dr. Leo Jung, rabbi of the Jewish Centre, New York.

The appointment of Mayor Abraham S. Hyman as acting adviser on Jewish affairs to John J. McCloy, United States High Commissioner for Germany, was announced. Major Hyman had been serving since August, 1946, as assistant adviser on Jewish affairs to the American Military government in Germany. The American Jewish Committee the Jewish Agency for Palestine, the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee and the World Jewish Congress, which have been co-operating with the American Military government and the High Commissioner in Jewish affairs, were informed of the change in Major Hyman's status. Major Hyman, who is forty-five, was practicing law in Gary, Ind., when he enlisted in the Army in July, 1942. Since November, 1944, he has been with the Judge Advocates department.

Yale Press Prints Maimonides' View On Jesus

A long-lost statement on Jesus Christ by Maimonides, leading Hebrew sage of the Middle Ages, has been found recently and appears in a volume published by the Yale University Press.

The discovery was made by the Rev. Dr. Abraham H. Hershman, Hebrew scholar, of Detroit, Mich., in an examination of early manuscripts and rare copies of the Code of Maimonides. Dr. Hershman was engaged in making the first translation from the Hebrew of Book Fourteen of the Code, known as "The Book of Judges," for the Yale Judaica Series.

In the long-missing statement Maimonides held that Jesus was not the Messiah because "He did not meet with full success and was slain."

"All the Prophets affirmed that the Messiah would redeem Israel, save them, gather their dispersed, and confirm the Commandments, but He (Christ) caused Israel to be destroyed by the sword, their remnants to be dispersed and humiliated," Maimonides wrote.

The Hebrew sage said that if Christ and Mohammed could not be accepted by the Jews as Messiah, both must be commended for awakening knowledge of monotheism among the peoples of the world, who otherwise might remain pagan.

"All these matters relating to Jesus of Nazareth and to Mohammed . . . only served to clear the way for King Messiah, to prepare the whole world to worship God with one accord," Maimonides wrote.

Maimonides' discussion of Christ was expunged by censors in the Middle Ages and had been missing in every available edition of the Code, but Dr. Hershman found one old manuscript that had escaped suppression.

The statement occured in a treatise of "The Book of Judges" entitled "Laws Concerning Kings and Wars." It formed the body of Maimonides' legal-theological discussion holding that Jesus was not the biblical Messiah.

This book is the second volume of a projected fifteen-volume translation of the entire Code to be published in the Yale Judaica Series. The first was "The Book of Civil Law," which appeared earlier by Jacob Rabinowitz, New York attorney and a leading Hebrew scholar.

The current book consists of five treatises: Laws Concerning the Sanhedrin (judges of tribunals), Laws Concerning Evidence, Laws Concerning Rebels, Laws Concerning Kings and Wars. Introduction of the Code to English readers has been one of the major efforts of Judaica Research at Yale, established in 1944 by Louis M. Rabinowitz of New York for research in Hebrew lore and literature.

BACTERIOLOGIST, ONCE OF BERLIN, DIES IN N.Y.

Dr. Ulrich Friedemann, chief of the department of bacteriology at the Jewish Hospital, in Brooklyn, N.Y., died at his home, 235 Steamboat Road, Great Neck, Long Island. He was 72 years old.

Dr. Friedemann was graduated from Heidelburg University in 1900. He later became professor of hygiene at the University of Berlin and at one time served in the Robert Koch Institute in Berlin. He also was chief of the department for infectious diseases at the Rudolf Virchow Hospital in Berlin.

In 1933, Dr. Friedemann was invited by Sir Henry Dale to become a member of the National Institute for Medical Research in London. Three years later he was invited by a former pupil, Dr. Hans Zinsser, to become chief of the department of bacteriology at Jewish Hospital, a position he held until his death.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Friedemann; a daughter, Mrs. Eva Lande, of Hamilton, Ohio; a son, Anton Morgenroth, who is a missionary in British East Africa; a sister, Miss Kate Friedemann, of New Jersey; a brother, Dr. Max Friedemann, of Manhattan, and a grandson, Stephen.

The Attempt To Stop DP Immigration Needs U.S. Action

By Rabbi Irving Miller, Of New York, President Of The American Jewish Congress

The following appeared as a letter to The New York Times:

In reluctant response to the mandate placed upon him by the Senate, Senator Pat McCarran, Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, on Jan. 25 introduced a bill purportedly "liberalizing" the Displaced Persons Act of 1948. There is no doubt that the present Displaced Persons Act stands in need of revision; that, as your editorial columns have stressed, it is restrictive, discriminatory and unworkable. There is also no doubt that Senator McCarran's proposals are designed to make this law more restrictive, more discriminatory and more unworkable.

The cynicism of Senator McCarran's recommendations is best reflected in his change of the definition of displaced person to include ten million persons of German origin—the Volksdeutsche. We have until now rightly rejected every attempt to force an artificial equation of "ethnic Germans" with DP's. Under the amendments now being urged by Senator McCarran the Displaced Persons Act for the first time would be made to dispense its benefits indifferently between those who were oppressed by Nazism and those who benefitted by it.

Nor is Senator McCarran content that this competition should proceed on an equal basis. The existing law provides that at least 40 per cent of the displaced persons entering the United States must be natives of countries "de facto annexed," i.e., the Baltic states and parts of Poland, and that at least 30 per cent of them must be agricultural workers. Those most familiar with the DP problem have unanimously condemned these previous provisions because they bestow an unjustifiable advantage upon certain groups of displaced persons to the detriment of all others and because they create a major administrative burden which retards the operation of the act.

Senator McCarran's reasons for insisting on retention of these provisions are obvious. The Displaced Persons Commission recently announced that it was forced to discontinue processing applications because of the impossibility of finding a sufficient number of qualified DP's who can satisfy the requirements of the present law. As Senator McCarran was well aware, few if any displaced persons will be able to meet his even more restrictive formulation. His new bill proposes to remedy this lack by making the preferences available to Volksdeutsche, large numbers of whom undoubtedly will be able to qualify for those special priorities.

As final evidence of this solicitude for persons of German origin, the McCarran bill proposes to allocate 50 per cent of the regular German and Austrian quotas through 1952 exclusively for their use. What is worse, it continues to define Volksdeutsche in terms of their "German ethnic origin," a term grimly reminiscent of the Nuremberg laws and offensive to all our traditions.

During discussions in committee Senator McCarran was the advocate of a clause admitting displaced persons into this country only in proportion to the number their religious or racial group bears to the total population of the United States. This would have meant that Jewish DP's could not exceed 5 per cent of the total number of DP's admitted, nor Catholic DP's 17 per cent, no matter what their need or qualifications. Thus, under Senator McCarran's direction a federal immigration bill for the first time would have introduced a numerus clausus or religious quota for Jews and Catholics.

On Feb. 2, a week after introducing his bill, Senator McCarran came forward with two new proposals which would completely stop immigration for displaced persons of any description.

These amendments prohibit the entry of any displaced persons when there are more than two million unemployed in this country or when there are more than two million married couples who live doubled up because of the housing shortage. Under either one of these provisions the immigration of displaced persons would now have to be entirely discontinued.

Obviously, it is Senator McCarran's purpose to effect a complete stoppage in the operation of the DP program. It is entirely possible that all of his recommendations are part of this same effort to complicate and confuse the issues in the hope that no bill will be passed. Whatever Senator McCarran's intentions may be, it is imperative that a bill extending the life of the displaced persons program be enacted and that that bill not be the one he recently introduced.

Determined, vigorous and fortright Senatorial action amending the McCarran bill is essential if DP legislation is to be restored to its proper purposes and the honor and good name of our country safeguarded.

200 Oldsters Enjoy Interfaith Party

There is no age limit to brotherhood, a celebration of 200 oldsters in New York demonstrated at the Home of Old Israel, 70 Jefferson Street. The Rabinowitzes and the Rheingolds and the Katzes at the home mingled with the Quinns and McNally's from the Hudson Guild Neighbors Club and fussed hospitably over James Clayton, an 82-year-old retired coachman from Washington who came with other Negro members from the Salvation Army's Red Shield Club.

"We should live so long to see such brotherhood," said Mr. and Mrs. David Gordon, both 84, who live at the home and "still hold hands" after sixty-two years of marriage. Mrs. Gordon added: "That's the right way it should be. It's best that everyone be friendly."

Mr. Gordon, who wore a yarmelke, the Orthodox Jewish skull cap, handed over a bright green paper cap to Mr. McNally.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Pomerantz, 81 and 79 respectively, shared fruit and candy with the Red Shield group. Mr. Pomerantz, who was a butcher for fifty years on the lower East Side, thought it was "fine" to meet people who came from "way uptown." And Mr. Clayton said, "Yes, sir, this is just wonderful," when he was invited to have a piece of the yellow-iced birthday cake prepared for six residents of the home, all in their 70's, who had birthdays.

To the strains of an accordion playing a Slavic folk-tune, Mrs. Sonia Ginsberg, 76, did a kazatska down the aisle so expertly that old men stroked their beards and the Boy Scouts from Troop 236 of the lower East Side clapped in rhythm. Soon waitresses, serving the ribbon sandwiches made by three home septuagenarians in "occupational therapy," parked their trays to dance with oldsters.

John McNally, 76, obliged with an Irish jig. This inspired Dennis Quinn, 81, to sing "Silver Threads Among the Gold," his tenor voice quavering as he intoned, "Darling, I am growing old." A Jewish neighbor plucked his sleeve. "Who isn't?" he asked.

Good nutrition, a well-balanced diet, early and regular treatment and advice by a competent dentist, thorough and regular mouth cleaning, and watchful care will do much to enable children — and grownups too—to keep their teeth sound and healthy throughout their lifetime.

ARGENTINA LOWERS BARS TO SOME REFUGEES

The Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (HIAS) was informed that the Argentinian Government had issued 150 permits for the immigration of 402 HIAS-sponsored Jewish refugees from Europe to the Argentine, comprising the first block of visas issued to Jewish survivors since the cessation of hostilities. According to Isaac L. Asofsky, executive director, about 750 such permits are expected to be issued to approximately 2,000 refugees who have filed applications with HIAS offices in Europe for immigration to the Argentine.

At the same time, the HIAS International headquarters was informed that the Argentine Government had granted immigration visas for 45 Jews who had to return to France aboard the SS Florida last December after being refused temporary stay in Uraguay where they hoped to receive their visas for Argentina. The visitors' visas which were issued to the migrants in France by Uraguayan Consuls, were not honored by authorities in Montevideo when the SS Florida arrived there.

All the migrants, Mr. Asofsky said, are close relatives of Argentine residents who were eligible for immigration to that country. They sought to wait in Uraguay rather than remain longer in Europe, and therefore made the ill-fated trip. On their return to France HIAS intervened and obtained re-entry permits for them while the Society's representatives in Argentina made representations in their behalf in an effort to obtain the "llamadas" (entry permits).

Tells Zionists To Invest, Youth To Pioneer

After sharp debate on Zionist policy in America in relation to Israel, the National Administration Council of the Zionist Organization of America unanimously accepted the report of Daniel Frisch, president of the organization. Mr. Frisch recently returned from Israel where he conferred with Zionist and Government officials.

The discussion at all-day sessions was highlighted by a defense by several Zionist regional presidents of Mr. Frisch's activities and his projected programs on behalf of the Zionist movement. However, strong criticism was voiced by Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, prominent Zionist leader and former chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and by Dr. Emanuel Neumann, immediate past president of the Zionist organization.

In his report to the Council, which is the ruling body of the Zionist Organization between conventions, Mr. Frisch spoke of his visit to Israel. He emphasized that "considerable progress had been made in the direction of a better understanding of the problems of America Jewry and American Zionism, but also toward a greater appreciation of the role the Zionist Organization of America can and shall play in the building of the State of Israel."

He discussed the progress that had been made in creating colonies in Israel and in interesting American young men and women "who will undertake to settle on ZOA colonies." He referred to the construction of ZOA House in Tel Aviv, and an arrangement with both the Jewish Agency and the World Confederation of General Zionists "that will put at our disposal $500,000 which we shall use to help our social service agencies to help the forgotten man in Israel."

Dr. Silver and Dr. Neumann deplored the fact that Mr. Frisch, since his election last June as head of a coalition slate, had issued several statements on various Zionist policies without consulting other leaders in the general Zionist movement.

Dr. Silver also denounced the "fiction" that he had attacked the Government of Israel, declaring, "I categorically deny it and resent it." He contended that internal Zionist dissensions belonged to the past and emphasized that the establishment of Israel called for a greater impetus of the Zionist movement to aid Israel.

He advocated a twofold program on behalf of the Zionist movement in the U.S. This program called for intensive efforts to stimulate the investment of private capital in Israel, and for the stimulation of a pioneering program in Israel by American youth. He also pointed to the need of the Zionist movement in the U.S. to assume a greater role as a political unit to aid Israel.

Rudolf G. Sonneborn, chairman of the Council, declared that the Zionist Organization "cannot help Israel by being the instrument of one man or ten men," but "must be the medium through which the cross-section of American Zionists, all animated by the profoundest good-will toward Israel may express itself."

"Israel is not at peace; Israel is engulfed by the shadows of war," he said. "Like disciplined soldiers, we Zionists of America should enroll to help Israel win against this new assault upon its survival."

TWO SISTERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME

Two sisters, one of them a Bronklyn grandmother and the other a Polish displaced person, met for the first time in New York, after a ship-side introduction by a representative of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

Mrs. Dora Weiner of 1121 Avenue U, went to Pier 60, North River, at the foot of West-Twentieth Street, to greet her unknown younger sister, Mrs. Rosaly Schneider, as she debarked from the Army transport Gen. R. L. Howze. Mrs. Schneider was accompanied by her husband, Israel, and by Marcus Eidelheit, her 21-year-old son by a previous marriage.

Mrs. Weiner explained that she had emigrated from Poland in 1910, a few months before the birth of her sister. When the two women came face to face, each exclaimed, in English and Polish, respectively: "Is that my sister?" They burst into tears as they embraced.

Mrs. Weiner said that she and her sister were the only survivors of their immediate family, and Mrs. Schneider, speaking through an interpreter, said she had traced her sister through officials in Europe, where she and her family were living in a displaced persons camp. They will make their home with Mrs. Weiner.

Testament Of Laws

"Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them, and ye shall be holy men unto Me."
EX. 21:1,30.

The modern temper shows dissatisfaction with law. So many believe that in our day there are too many laws, which weary human beings and make life burdensome. Hence, many try to shun the law or avoid it. At best, they look upon the laws as a necessary evil. In Judaism, law is one of the highest expressions of spirituality. Law makes in Judaism for ethical discipline.

Much of Jewish law has to do with social legislation and is meant for the protection of the weak, the needy, and the stranger. Jewish law is rooted in the moral sense and has its appeal in reason. Judaism, because of its laws, is not reduced to a mere creed, but rather because of its laws it is a way of life, conditioning men to reach out for holiness and for ethical living. The prophets and psalmists may summon men to do justly and to love mercy, but law is essential to give definition to the concepts of justice and mercy.

For the religious Jew, who ever strove to imitate the holiness of God, the law was a joy and not a yoke. In that law he felt himself most free by its observances. Among Jews, there has always been a passion and a zeal for the law of righteousness and the study of Torah became one of the holiest pursuits.

Perhaps social legislation in Israel played such an important part even more than in the contemporary life of the world because of the spirit of family life which created a social consciousness and, too, because of the ethical teachings of the prophets. This social consciousness was passed on to the Rabbis who in their legal codes continued the social legislation and re-inforced it by new enactments to meet the changed conditions of their own times.

Take, for example, the Sabbath institution and behold the sublime laws pertaining to its observance. The Babylonians could not conceive of a day of rest in the same sense as the Jewish Sabbath is understood. In fact they considered the Jews a lazy people, because Jews dared to institute a Sabbath for all human beings, including servants and even domestic animals. In the Sabbath institution, we have the first definition regulating hours of labour per week. It all has to do with the moral and ethical discipline for the purpose of improving character and ennobling the lives of those who observe the Sabbath. Behold, therefore, the broad humanitarianism found in the Sabbath regulations.

"And a stranger shalt thou not oppress". The stranger, according to Jewish law, was to be highly regarded, receive equal treatment, and not be wronged. It was not required of him that he adopt the Jewish faith. Primarily, he had to be dealt with justly because he was a human being and equally a child of God. The Greeks called strangers barbarians and the Egyptians hated strangers. In the Torah we are commanded thirty-six times to have regard for the stranger. In our modern life there is still a tendency to regard the stranger with suspicion, rather than with sympathy and understanding.

How sublime are the laws pertaining to the relief of the poor, in the Torah legislation! Certain portions of the crops we are commanded to leave for the poor and the needy! Also the gleaning of the fields is left after the harvest for those in need. There has even been instituted a tithe for the benefit of the poor.

"If thou meet thy enemy's ox going astray, thou must return it unto him." The fact that you are estranged from thy fellow man, must not influence your action. He is still your fellow man and no thought of vengeance must overtake you. You must help your fellow man because he is in need. The reference in the New Testament which speaks of a teaching, "hate thine enemy", is baseless and a pure invented sentence. Nowhere in Jewish teaching is such an injunction found. Always in Jewish law there is the emphasis that we practice solicitude even for the enemy when he is in need.

"Life for life, tooth for tooth, eye for eye." How misunderstood is this legislation of the Torah! This verse is often quoted with the purpose of contrasting Christianity and Judaism and pointing to the fact that Christianity gives emphasis to mercy. Indeed, if this legislation is properly understood, it may well be considered a law of mercy.

In an age of bitter feuds, blood feuds, where the blood of many would be shed for the crime of one, when justice was a matter of vendetta, when family fought against family and clan against clan, under such conditions this humanitarian law was instituted, insisting of a minimum penalty, "a life for a life", not many for a life, not massacre, not unending hostilities. This sentence of the Torah was never intended to be literally enforced, nor was it ever fulfilled as written.

The Rabbis insisted that restitution according to magnitude of offence should be made. Actually, the Rabbis instituted a scale of fines by which the guilty was to be punished. How foolish then to compare this sentence, "a life for a life", with the New Testament, more tender teachings, and thus attempt to glorify the New Testament, and try to show the superiority of Christian teachings. One could easily select some of the most sublime utterances of compassion and mercy from the Old Testament, which are as equal to the New Testament teachings in mercy.

But only bigotry and narrowness of mind would permit such indulgence of contrast. It must be understood that the Pentatuech is not only a religious system, but also a legal code. It is unfair to take a cold-blooded sentence from a law book and compare it with a glorious spiritual utterance from another book, pertaining to the teachings in different fields of endeavour. Yet this maxim, "a life for a life", is incorporated into Christian civilization and constitutes the very cornerstone of modern law.

There can be no civilized life without law. Punishment according to law is not designed to hurt, but to help us toward holiness. Virtue has its own reward and the wages of sin are death.

MRS. ROOSEVELT

important to the citizens of the United States that everywhere in the world where an effort is being made to give all people within their borders human rights and freedom, we must have a share in helping those people attain their desires."

She declared that it is "not going to be easy to change the pattern in many countries that have regarded human rights and freedoms as important; now here we have a country that does regard these rights as important, therefore, we must help in every way possible."

Earlier in her address, Mrs. Roosevelt drew a similar picture between the migratory camps that existed in America during the depression and the ten camps in Israel for newcomers, and pleaded for support for both the newcomers who come to our shores and to lighten the burden as much as we can of financial aid from the organizations.

MONTREAL UNITED ISRAEL APPEAL

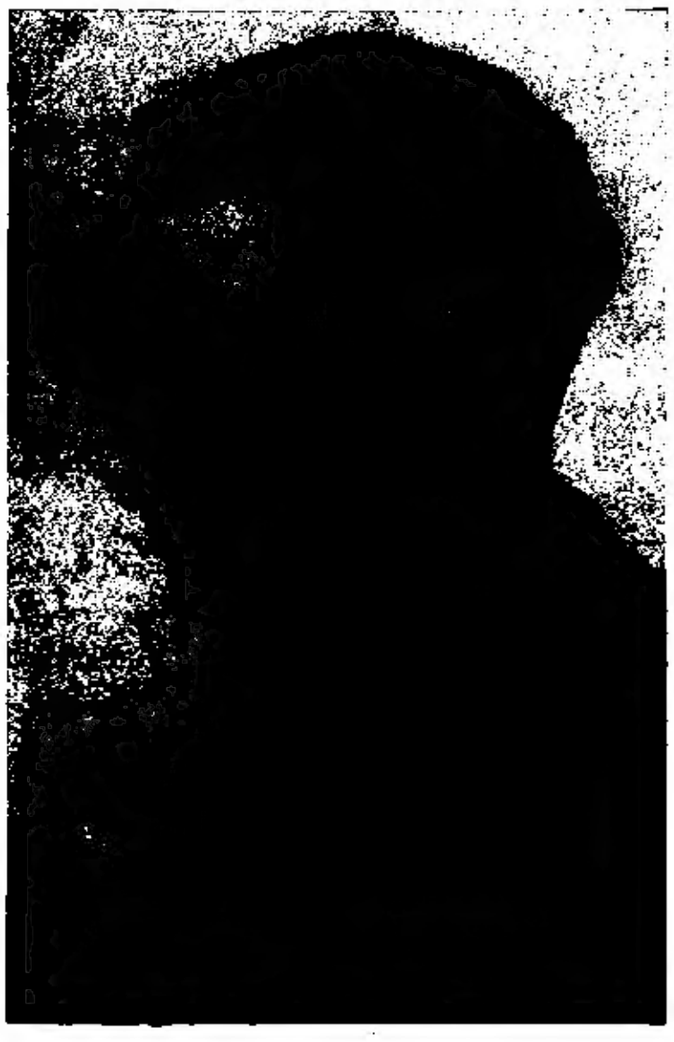
MARCH 14TH – APRIL 14TH, 1950

1950 Objective: $1,680,000

OPENING DINNER Tuesday, March 14th, at 6.30 P.M. – WINDSOR HOTEL

20,000 immigrants are arriving in Israel each month in "THE GREATEST HOMECOMING IN HISTORY"

Henry Morgenthau, Jr., who recently returned from a visit to Israel, declared "It is impossible for Israel to carry the burden of receiving and caring for all who escaped the fate of the martyred six million Jews of Europe without adequate help from us. With all the goodwill and sympathy in the world, with all the austerity and sacrifice of which human beings are capable, the Jews of Israel cannot create food, housing, jobs, clothing, medicine out of thin air."



GUEST SPEAKER — DR. ABBA HILLEL SILVER
Eminent Zionist leader and orator

The rehabilitation of the new arrivals in Israel is in our hands. We must meet our responsibility through the UNITED ISRAEL APPEAL

Rabbi Silver presented the Zionist case before the Assembly of the United Nations. He is one of the leaders responsible for the establishment of the State of Israel. He has served as Chairman of the American Section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, Chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council and President of the Zionist Organization of America.
